

60. Driving in reckless manner

(1) For the purposes of this section, a motor vehicle is driven in a reckless manner if it is driven in a manner (which expression includes speed) that is inherently dangerous or that is, having regard to all the circumstances of the case, dangerous to the public or to any person.

(1A) A person commits an offence if the person wilfully drives a motor vehicle in a reckless manner in —

- (a) a confiscation zone; or
- (b) any other place.

[(1b), (1c), (1D) deleted]

(2) A person charged with an offence against this section may, instead of being convicted of that offence, be convicted of an offence against section 60A, 61, 62 or 62A.
